

Editorial

Law schools ought to be concerned with current developments and design courses to meet with the ongoing trends. Quality legal education is essential for nation building. Unless learners are exposed to quality research, the purpose of study will remain void. A law journal around the globe is held in high regard; it is sine-qua-non for enhancing the purpose of legal education. This academic publication focuses on presenting some of the current issues in the global arena. The articles offer an unbiased reflection of specific legal issues. In the present era there are several threats to mankind from different dimensions. Keeping pace with ongoing developments in various fields, the fourth volume of the journal has tried to bring articles of recent concerns in different fields of law.

We have made a sincere effort to maintain quality of the journal by selecting the best articles. The present issue has covered varied topics from international as well as national perspectives. The authors have concentrated on the recent developments covering a wide array of legal issues. The themes of Environmental Jurisprudence, Feminist Jurisprudence, Intellectual Property Law, Cyber Law & International Law are the key areas that are addressed in the current volume.

I express my gratitude to all the contributors who have extended their wholehearted cooperation in helping us bring out this volume. It is my privilege to thank the management of CMR University for their constant support and encouragement in all our academic endeavours. A sincere thanks to the editorial board for bringing out this publication.
